FOUNDATION™

Welcoming Schools

TCNJ School of Humanities and Social Sciences is offering two educator professional development opportunities with Human Rights Campaign Foundation Welcoming Schools. Welcoming Schools is a nationally recognized professional development program providing training and resources to elementary school educators. Attend the Welcoming Schools workshops so you are better prepared to implement an inclusive curriculum.

Intersectionality and Law and Policies to Support New Jersey Requirements

- Learn Vocabulary and Concepts around anti-bias and anti-racist frameworks and intersectionality.
- Identify and Understand Complexities of Student Experiences
- Explore Bias in Policies and Procedures to Affirm a Kaleidoscope of Identities
- Understand Laws and Protections as they pertain to creating safe and welcoming schools
- Learn Legal Trends to become familiar with the changing legal landscape, current trends where courts are leaning
- Build Confidence to Create Affirming Spaces to link the legal landscape with best school practices

Supporting Transgender and Non-Binary Students

- Learn Critical Data that shows the critical need for active support of transgender and non-binary students in schools
- Learn Vocabulary and Concepts to talk respectfully and in an age-appropriate way about gender topics with students
- Understand Laws and Protections for transgender students
- Examine Policies and Procedures to support transgender and non-binary students in school settings.
- Gain Confidence Responding to questions from staff, students and families around gender identity and school practices

Jennifer Braverman is a Welcoming Schools nationally certified facilitator through the Human Rights Campaign and an adjunct faculty member in the Women, Gender and Sexuality Studies department at TCNJ teaching Gender and Pop Culture and most recently, LGBTQ Issues in K-12 Education. She currently is teaching AP Studio Art, Digital Mixed Media and many other art courses to grades 7-12 at Maple Shade High School. She received an M.A. in Art Education from Boston University.
